Capital: Montgomery Time: Central (GMT - 6)

Background: Alabama, one of the southern states of the United States, bordered on the north by Tennessee; on the east by Georgia; on the south by Florida and the Gulf of Mexico; and on the west by Mississippi.

Called the "Heart of Dixie", Alabama entered the Union on December 14, 1819, as the 22nd state. In 1861 it became a founding member of the Confederate States of America during the American Civil War. Alabama's economy was long dominated by farming and cotton cultivation, but by the 1990s manufacturing, government, and services were the chief economic sectors. The name of the state is taken from the Alabama River, which was named after the Alabama, or Alibamon, people, who belonged to the Creek confederacy. Its major cities are Montgomery (the capital), Birmingham, Mobile, and Huntsville.

Population: According to the 1990 census, Alabama had 4,040,587 inhabitants, an increase of 3.8 per cent over 1980. The population estimate for 1997 was 4,319,154. The average population density in 1990 was 30 people per sq km (77 per sq mi). Whites made up 73.6 per cent of the population and blacks 25.3 per cent; additional groups included Asian or Pacific Islander, 0.5 per cent; Native American or Aleut, 0.4 per cent; and other races, 0.2 per cent.

Location: Alabama, one of the southern states of the United States, bordered on the north by Tennessee; on the east by Georgia; on the south by Florida and the Gulf of Mexico; and on the west by Mississippi.

Area: Alabama has an area of 135,293 sq km (52,237 sq mi), the 30th largest state in the United States; 1.7 per cent of the land area is owned by the federal government. The state is roughly rectangular in shape, and its extreme dimensions are 533 km (331 mi) from north to south and 338 km (210 mi) from east to west. The approximate mean elevation is 152 m (500 ft).

Industries: Among the major mineral deposits are coal, located mainly in the northern half of the state, and oil and natural gas, found principally in the East Gulf Coastal Plain. Natural gas production grew in Alabama throughout the early 1990s, becoming the state's second most valuable mineral product. The state also has substantial deposits of limestone, iron ore, sand and gravel, bauxite, and clay. Alabama is in the Black Belt, an area of rich black soil, where cotton was long the main crop. Peanuts are now the principal crop, though soya beans, cotton, hay, and greenhouse products are also important. The sale of livestock and livestock products accounted for three quarters of the income generated on farms in the early 1990s, with sales of crops accounting for one quarter.

Leading industries include clothing and textiles, transport equipment, primary metals, and paper and paper products. Other major manufactured products include industrial machinery, processed foods, and rubber and plastic products.
