Background: Arizona gained statehood in 1912 as the 48th state completing the present-day picture of the "lower forty-eight." It was formed from what was then the Arizona Territory, but from lands that previously had belonged to Mexico and New Mexico. At the end of the Mexican War in 1848, a disputed piece of land along the international border became known as the Gadsden Purchase, named for the minister to Mexico, James Gadsden who negotiated for the United States to purchase the 50,000 square miles of land for ten million dollars. The area was south of the Gila River and extended west from the Rio Grande to the California border. The Arizona Territory was formed in 1863 and by the decennial census of 1870, the state's population was slightly less than ten thousand residents.

Population: Ranked 15th in the US - Total 6,500,180 (2008 est.). The population of the Phoenix metropolitan area increased by 45.3% from 1990 through 2000, helping to make Arizona the second fastest growing state in the nation in the 1990s (the fastest was Nevada). Currently the population of the Phoenix metropolitan area is estimated to be over 4.3 million. According to the 2005-2007 American Community Survey conducted by the U.S. Census Bureau, White Americans made up 76.4% of Arizona's population; of which 59.6% were non-Hispanic whites. Hispanics and Latinos (of any race) made up 29.0% of Arizona's population.

Location: The State of Arizona is a state located in the southwestern region of the United States. The capital and largest city is Phoenix. The second largest city is Tucson, followed in size by the four Phoenix metropolitan area cities of Mesa, Glendale, Chandler, and Scottsdale. Arizona is one of the Four Corners states. It borders New Mexico, Utah, Nevada, California, touches Colorado, and has a 389-mile (626 km) international border with the states of Sonora and Baja California in Mexico.

Area: Arizona is located in the western United States as one of the Four Corners states. Arizona is the sixth largest state in area, after New Mexico and before Nevada. Of the state's 113,998 square miles (295,000 km<sup>2</sup>), approximately 15% is privately owned. The remaining area is public forest and park land, state trust land and Native American reservations. Arizona is best known for its desert landscape, which is rich in xerophyte plants such as the cactus. It is also known for its climate, which presents exceptionally hot summers and mild winters. Less well known is the pine-covered high country of the Colorado Plateau in the north-central portion of the state, which contrasts with the desert Basin and Range region in the southern portions of the state.

Industries: Manufacturing, which has grown rapidly since World War II (1939-45), became the state's leading economic activity in the 1970s. Factors contributing to this growth included a favorable tax structure, available labor, plentiful electric power, and low land costs. The major manufacturing centers are the Phoenix and Tucson areas. Principal industries include nonelectrical machinery, electrical and electronic equipment (computers, semiconductors, communication equipment), aircraft equipment, food products, and printing and publishing. Military equipment accounts for much of the output. The total value added by manufacturing in 1997 amounted to an estimated $44 billion. Principal manufacturers of electronic and technology-intensive equipment in Arizona include: Motorola, Allied Signal Aerospace, Honeywell, Hughes Missile Systems Co., and Intel. Intel expanded its operations in Arizona with the construction of a $1.3 billion plant in 1994. While high-tech manufacturing actually declined in Arizona in 1998 and early 1999 in part because of the Asian financial crisis, the 62% of the state's low-tech manufacturing improved. The manufacturing and construction employment growth rates shrank from 1994 to 1999. Earnings of persons employed in Arizona increased from $72 billion in 1997 to $79 billion in 1998, an increase of 10%. The largest industries in 1998 were services, 28.9% of earnings; state and local government, 11.2%; and durable goods manufacturing, 11.2%. Of the industries that accounted for at least 5% of earnings in 1998, the slowest growing from 1997 to 1998 was state and local government, which increased 4.9%; the fastest was wholesale trade (6.4% of earnings in 1998), which increased 11.8%.
