Capital: Dover Time: GMT - 5

Background: Delaware is known as the "First State" because on December 7, 1787, it became the first of the original 13 states to ratify the US Constitution and thereby enter the Union. In the 1990s Delaware's economy was dominated by services and manufacturing; the state was noted as the home of the huge E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Company chemical firm (Du Pont). The state is named after Delaware Bay and the Delaware River, both named in honour of Thomas West, 3rd Baron De la Warr, the first colonial governor of Virginia. Its major cities are Dover (the capital), Wilmington (the largest city), Newark, Milford, and Elsmere.

Population: According to the 1990 census, Delaware had 666,168 inhabitants, an increase of 12.1 per cent over 1980. The population estimate for 1997 was 731,581. The average population density in 1990 was 132 people per sq km (341 per sq mi). The greater part of the population was concentrated in the northern half of the state. Whites accounted for 80.3 per cent of the population and blacks 16.9 per cent; additional population groups included 2,301 people of Chinese descent, 2,183 people of Asian Indian background, and 1,982 Native Americans. Nearly 16,000 people were of Latino ancestry.

Location: Delaware (state), one of the eastern states of the United States, bordered on the north by Pennsylvania; on the east by the Delaware River, Delaware Bay, and the Atlantic Ocean; and on the south and west by Maryland.

Area: With an area of 6,208 sq km (2,397 sq mi) Delaware is the second-smallest state of the United States; 2.4 per cent of its land area is owned by the federal government. The state is roughly triangular in shape, and its extreme dimensions are about 154 km (96 mi) from north to south and about 56 km (35 mi) from east to west. Elevations range from sea level to 137 m (448 ft) from the top of an unnamed hill at the northern end of the state. The approximate mean elevation is 18 m (60 ft), lower than that of any other state. Delaware's Atlantic coast extends 45 km (28 mi); it has 613 km (381 mi) of tidal shoreline.

Industries: The only significant mineral resources in Delaware are sand and gravel, which are found throughout the state; the major deposits are in the north. Deposits of magnesium compounds, clays, gemstones, and iron ore are of minor importance.

Timber is a small-scale industry, largely in woods on farmland. Yellow pine, red oak, and sweet gum are felled, and yellow poplar and other trees are cut for making veneers. The state also produces limited amounts of pulpwood. The state is a major producer of chickens and poultry produce. Other agricultural commodities include potatoes, soya beans, apples, nuts, melons, and berries.

The fishing industry lands an annual catch worth about $3 million. Crabs are the most valuable catch, but oysters, clams and sea trout are also important. Apart from the production of chemicals, major manufacturing industries include synthetic textiles, motor vehicles and parts, processed foods, precision instruments, rubber and plastic goods, printed items, and industrial equipment.
