Capital: Atlanta Time: GMT - 5

Background: Georgia entered the Union on January 2, 1788, as the fourth state. During the American Civil War it was a member of the Confederate States of America. Once principally a farming state, known for its considerable cotton output, Georgia in the late 1990s had an economy centred on manufacturing and service industries. Georgia is named after George II of Great Britain and is known both as the "Empire State of the South" and the "Peach State". Its major cities are Atlanta (the capital), Columbus, Savannah, Macon, and Albany.

Population: According to the 1990 census, Georgia had 6,478,216 inhabitants, an increase of 18.6 per cent over 1980. The estimated population in 1997 was 7,486,242. The average population density in 1990 was 42 people per sq km (110 per sq mi). Whites made up 71 per cent of the population and blacks 27 per cent; other groups included 15,275 people of Korean origin, 13,926 people of Asian Indian background, 12,926 Native Americans, 12,657 people of Chinese ancestry. About 109,000 people were of Latino origin.

Location: Georgia (state), one of the southern Atlantic coast states of the United States, bordered on the north by Tennessee and North Carolina; on the east by South Carolina and the Atlantic Ocean; on the south by Florida, and on the west by Alabama. The Savannah River forms part of the eastern border and the Chattahoochee River part of the western border.

Area: Georgia has an area of 152,750 sq km (58,977 sq mi) and is the largest US state east of the Mississippi River; 4 per cent of its land area is owned by the federal government. The state is roughly rectangular in shape, and its extreme dimensions are about 515 km (320 mi) from north to south and 441 km (274 mi) from east to west. Elevations range from sea level, along the Atlantic Ocean, to 1,458 m (4,784 ft), at the top of Brasstown Bald, near the northern boundary. The mean elevation of the state is 183 m (600 ft). The coastline along the Atlantic is 161 km (100 mi) long.

Industries: Georgia contains sizeable deposits of several important minerals. There are large deposits of kaolin, a high-grade white clay, marble, and granite. Other minerals include coal, stone, sand and gravel, talc, feldspar, mica, soapstone, barite, manganese, and bentonite.

Georgia's economy has an important agricultural sector. The state usually ranks with Arkansas and Alabama as the top three US producers of chickens and leads all states in peanut and pecan production. Other agricultural products include chicken eggs, corn, soya beans, cattle, tobacco, cotton, hay, beans, peas, and peaches.

A substantial amount of timber is cut each year from the state's extensive commercial timberland. Approximately two thirds of the annual tree harvest is softwood, much of which is used to make paper. There is a relatively small fishing industry, of which shellfish make up the bulk of the catch. Shrimp is the leading variety landed, although crabs, oysters, and clams are also caught. In the mid-1990s the value of the fish catch was US$21 million.

Leading types of manufactured goods are clothing and textiles, transport equipment, paper, and paper products. The state also produces a great variety of foodstuffs, notably processed peanuts and fruit, and processed shrimps. There are many paper mills, and cellophane and rayon are made from the cellulose of pine trees. Pine and hardwood flooring is also produced.

Ports and Harbors: Port of Brunswick, Port of Savannah.
