Capital: Springfield Time: GMT - 6

Background: Illinois entered the Union on December 3, 1818, as the 21st state. It is known for its associations with Abraham Lincoln. The state was transformed into a leading manufacturing region in the late 19th century but continued as a major producer of farm commodities. Chicago, a great metropolis on Lake Michigan, is Illinois's principal economic and cultural centre. The name of the state is taken from the Illinois, or Illini, Native American Confederation. Illinois is known as the "Prairie State". Its major cities are Springfield (the capital), Chicago (the nation's third-largest city), Rockford, Peoria, and Aurora.

Population: According to the 1990 census, Illinois had 11,430,602 inhabitants, only 4,006 people more than in 1980. The average population density in 1990 was 76 people per sq km (197 per sq mi). The population estimate for 1997 was 11,895,849. Whites made up 78.3 per cent of the population (down from 80.8 per cent in 1980), while blacks accounted for 14.8 per cent. The number of Asians and Pacific Islanders rose by nearly 79 per cent in the 1980s; in 1990 they included 64,224 people of Filipino descent, 64,200 Asian Indians, 49,936 people of Chinese background, and 41,506 people of Korean descent. More than 900,000 residents claimed Latino ancestry, and there were 20,970 Native Americans. Polish Americans made up a significant minority in the Chicago area.

Location: Illinois (state), one of the Great Lakes states of the United States, bordered on the north by Wisconsin; on the north-east by Lake Michigan; on the east by Indiana; on the south by Kentucky; and on the west by Missouri and Iowa. The Wabash River forms part of the eastern boundary, the Ohio River forms the southern boundary, and the Mississippi River forms the western boundary.

Area: Illinois has an area of 150,007 sq km (57,918 sq mi); 1.4 per cent of its land area is owned by the federal government. The state's extreme dimensions are 610 km (379 mi) from north to south and 343 km (213 mi) from east to west. Elevations range from 85 m (279 ft), near the confluence of the Ohio and Mississippi rivers in the extreme south, to 376 m (1,235 ft), at the summit of Charles Mound, in the north-western part of the state. The approximate mean elevation is 180 m (600 ft). About 4,079 sq km (1,575 sq mi) of Lake Michigan is in Illinois.

Industries: Illinois has substantial deposits of bituminous coal, oil, stone, sand, and gravel. The state is also a notable producer of cement, peat, clay, lead, zinc, natural gas, copper, gemstones, and tripoli (a type of diatomaceous earth).

The combination of soil and climate is ideal for farming in Illinois, which ranks fifth among the US states in terms of yearly farming income. The state typically leads in national soya bean production and is second to Iowa in corn output. Other important crops include wheat, hay, oats, sorghum grain, barley, rye, apples, and tomatoes. The state also produces large quantities of commercial flowers, notably carnations, roses, and gladioli.

Ports and Harbors: Port of Chicago
