Capital: Indianapolis Time: GMT - 5

Background: Indiana entered the Union on December 1, 1816, as the 19th state. Three 19th-century US presidents—William Henry Harrison, his grandson Benjamin Harrison, and Abraham Lincoln—lived in Indiana for substantial periods. Manufacturing became the chief economic activity in the early 20th century, but at the start of the 1990s the state was also a major producer of farm commodities, especially corn, soya beans, and pigs. The state's name, which refers to Native Americans ("Indians"), was coined in the 1760s and applied to a private tract of land in Pennsylvania; the name was officially adopted when Indiana Territory was formed in 1800. Indiana is known as the "Hoosier State". Its major cities are Indianapolis (the capital), Fort Wayne, Evansville, Gary, South Bend, and Hammond.

Population: According to the 1990 census, Indiana had 5,544,159 inhabitants, an increase of 1 per cent over 1980. The estimated population in 1997 was 5,864,108 sq mi). Whites made up 90.6 per cent of the population and blacks 7.8 per cent; additional population groups included some 12,453 Native Americans, 7,371 people of Chinese origin, 7,095 Asian Indians, 5,475 people of Korean background, 4,754 people of Filipino ancestry, and 4,715 people of Japanese background. Nearly 100,000 Indiana residents were of Latino origin.

Location: Indiana, one of the Great Lakes states of the United States, bordered on the north by Illinois and Michigan; on the east by Ohio; on the south by Kentucky; and on the west by Illinois.

Area: Indiana has an area of 94,328 sq km (36,420 sq mi); 2 per cent of the land area is owned by the federal government. The state is roughly rectangular in shape, and its extreme dimensions are about 459 km (285 mi) from north to south and about 285 km (177 mi) from east to west. Elevations range from 98 m (320 ft), along the Ohio River in the south-western corner of the state, to 383 m (1,257 ft), in Franklin township near the eastern border. The approximate mean elevation is about 210 m (700 ft).

Industries: Major minerals are bituminous coal, oil, stone, gypsum, sand, clay, and gravel. Indiana is also an important producer of masonry cement and is the source of most of the nation's building limestone, which is quarried mainly in the south-central part of the state. Important crops are maize, soya beans, hay, wheat, oats, potatoes, tomatoes, various vegetables, tobacco, and apples. Forestry and fishing are of relatively minor importance. Leading manufacturing industries are primary metals, electronic equipment, transport equipment, processed food, chemicals, rubber and plastic goods, and paper and paper products.
