Capital: Annapolis Time: GMT - 5

Background: Maryland entered the Union on April 28, 1788, as the seventh of the 13 original states. The economy of the state, known for tobacco production in colonial times, became dominated by manufacturing in the late 19th century and in the 1990s depends primarily on the service and government sectors. Baltimore, Maryland's largest city, is a major seaport, and the south-eastern region of the state produces large quantities of chickens. The state is named after Henrietta Maria, the wife of Charles I of England. Maryland is also known as the "Old Line State" and the "Free State". Its major cities are Annapolis (the capital), Baltimore, Rockville, Frederick, Gaithersburg, and Bowie.

Population: According to the 1990 census, Maryland had 4,781,468 inhabitants, an increase of 13.4 per cent over 1980. The population estimate for 1997 was 5,094,289. The average population density in 1990 was 150 people per sq km (389 per sq mi); considerably higher population concentrations were found in the central part of the state. Whites made up 71 per cent of the population and blacks 24.9 per cent; additional population groups included 30,868 people of Chinese ancestry, 30,320 people of Korean origin, 28,330 Asian Indians, 19,376 people of Filipino background, 12,601 Native Americans, 8,862 people of Vietnamese descent, and 6,617 people of Japanese extraction. Approximately 125,100 Maryland residents claimed Latino ancestry.

Location: Maryland, one of the Atlantic coast states of the United States, bordered on the north by Pennsylvania, on the east by Delaware and the Atlantic Ocean, on the south by Virginia, and on the south-west and west by West Virginia. The District of Columbia, site of the US capital, is an enclave in the western part of the state. The Potomac River forms most of Maryland's western boundary, and Chesapeake Bay deeply indents the eastern section of the state.

Area: Maryland has an area of 31,849 sq km (12,297 sq mi); 3.1 per cent of the land area is owned by the federal government. Maryland has an irregular shape, and its extreme dimensions are 385 km (240 mi) from east to west and about 200 km (125 mi) from north to south. Elevations range from sea level to 1,024 m (3,360 ft), at the summit of Backbone Mountain, in the north-west. The approximate mean elevation is 110 m (350 ft). Maryland's coastline along the Atlantic Ocean is only 50 km (31 mi) long, but the state's tidal shoreline, which includes Chesapeake Bay and its many arms, has a length of 5,134 km (3,190 mi). The Atlantic coast is formed here by a narrow barrier island, which in part sets off Chincoteague, Assawoman, and Isle of Wight bays.

Industries: Maryland's principal mineral resources are construction materials and coal. Other significant minerals are sand, gravel, limestone, serpentine, granite, gneiss, gabbro, quartzite, sandstone, slate, clay, peat, natural gas, and talc. Leading agricultural products are broiler chickens, dairy products, corn, soya beans, hay, tobacco, wheat, barley, potatoes, and other vegetables. About 90 per cent of Maryland's forests are classified as commercial timberland. Hardwoods, including oak and yellow poplar, and loblolly pine (a softwood) account for the bulk of the harvest.

There is a small but significant fishing industry, of which crabs, clams, and oysters are the main catch. Principal manufactured products are electric and electronic equipment, processed foods, primary metals, and chemicals.

Ports and Harbors: 4

Airports: 2
