Capital: Lansing Time: GMT - 5

Background: Michigan entered the Union on January 26, 1837, as the 26th state. Its economy, dominated in the 19th century by fur trapping, farming, forestry, and mining, became highly industrialized after 1900 as the state developed into the major centre of the United States motor industry. In the 1990s service industries (including tourism), agriculture, and mining also were important economic activities. President Gerald R. Ford lived for many years in Michigan. The name of the state is taken from Lake Michigan, the name of which is derived from an Algonquian term meaning "big water". Michigan is also known as the "Wolverine State" and the "Great Lake State". Its major cities are Lansing (the capital), Detroit (the seventh largest city in the United States), Grand Rapids, Warren, and Flint.

Population: According to the 1990 census, Michigan had 9,295,297 inhabitants, an increase of 0.4 per cent over 1980. The estimated population for 1997 was 9,773,892. The average population density for the whole of Michigan in 1990 was 37 people per sq km (96 per sq mi); based on land area only, the population density was 63 per sq km (164 per sq mi). Most of the population was concentrated in the southern half of the Lower Peninsula. Whites made up 83.4 per cent of the population and blacks 13.9 per cent; additional population groups included 55,131 Native Americans, 23,845 Asian Indians, 19,145 people of Chinese ancestry, 16,316 people of Korean origin, 13,786 people of Filipino extraction, 10,681 people of Japanese background, and 6,117 people of Vietnamese descent. Principal Native American groups included Ojibwa, Ottawa, and Potawatomi. About 201,600 people reported Latino ancestry.

Location: Michigan, one of the Great Lakes states of the United States, consisting mainly of two large peninsulas, the Lower Peninsula and the smaller Upper Peninsula. The state is bordered on the north and east by Ontario, on the south by Ohio and Indiana, and on the west by Wisconsin. Most of its boundaries are formed by four of the Great Lakes: Superior, Huron, Erie, and Michigan.

Area: Michigan has an area of 250,465 sq km (96,705 sq mi); 9.8 per cent of its land area is owned by the federal government. The extreme dimensions of the Lower Peninsula, which is shaped like a mitten, are about 460 km (285 mi) from north to south and about 315 km (195 mi) from east to west. The greatest distances in the Upper Peninsula are about 515 km (320 mi) from east to west and about 200 km (125 mi) from north to south. The lowest point in the state is 174 m (572 ft), along Lake Erie in the south-east; the highest is 603 m (1,979 ft), from the summit of Mount Arvon in the north-west; the approximate mean elevation is about 270 m (900 ft). Michigan has a Great Lakes shoreline of about 5,310 km (3,300 mi).

Industries: Michigan has substantial deposits of a number of minerals, including sand, gravel, limestone, iron ore, marble, oil, and natural gas. The state's numerous bogs contain abundant resources of peat. Other deposits include salt, copper, clay, coal, gypsum, magnesium, marl, potash, shale, and silver.

Leading agricultural commodities are dairy products, corn, hay, soya beans, beef cattle, pigs, beans, wheat, oats, potatoes, cucumber, asparagus, and sugar beet. Fruits include cherries, apples, peaches, blueberries, plums, and pears.

Except in the western part of the Upper Peninsula, forestry is relatively unimportant economically, with much of the wood being used for timber and pulp for paper. Fishing also contributes relatively little to the economy; leading commercial species include whitefish, alewife, catfish, trout, and perch.

Michigan is one of the leading manufacturing states in the United States. Principal industries are transport equipment (especially cars), industrial machinery (including engines and office and construction equipment), iron and steel, rubber, breakfast cereals and other food, clothing, paper, furniture, and plastics.
