Background: Montana entered the Union on November 8, 1889, as the 41st state. Historically, it has had an economy based on its diversified natural resources. The state is divided into two distinct physical and economic regions: the Rocky Mountains in the west, producing timber and metal ores, and the Great Plains in the east, producing oil, coal, and agricultural goods. The name of the state is derived from a Spanish word meaning mountain and was first applied to the territory in 1864. Montana is known as the "Treasure State". Its major cities are Helena (the capital), Billings, Great Falls, Missoula, and Butte.

Population: According to the 1990 census, Montana had 799,065 inhabitants, an increase of 1.6 per cent over 1980. The estimated population in 1997 was 878,810. In 1990 the average population density of two people per sq km (five per sq mi) was one of the lowest of any US state. Whites made up 92.7 per cent of the population and blacks 0.3 per cent; additional population groups included 47,524 Native Americans (5.9 per cent of the total population) and 4,259 people of Asian or Pacific Islands origin. Among the most prominent of Montana's many Native American groups were the Blackfoot, Cheyenne, Crow, Flathead, and Ojibwa; nearly two thirds of the state's Native American population lived on reservations. Montana also had about 12,200 people of Latino background.

Location: Montana, one of the Midwestern states of the United States, bordered on the north by the Canadian provinces of British Columbia, Alberta, and Saskatchewan; on the east by North Dakota and South Dakota; on the south by Wyoming and Idaho; and on the west by Idaho. The Continental Divide forms much of the south-western boundary.

Area: With an area of 380,847 sq km (147,046 sq mi), Montana is the fourth-largest state in the United States; 29.4 per cent of the land area is owned by the federal government. The state is roughly rectangular in shape, and its extreme dimensions are 517 km (321 mi) from north to south and 877 km (545 mi) from east to west. Elevations range from a low of 555 m (1,820 ft) along the Kootenai River at the north-western border of the state to a high of 3,901 m (12,799 ft) at the top of Granite Peak in the south near Yellowstone National Park. The approximate mean elevation is 1,036 m (3,400 ft).

Industries: Montana is rich in mineral resources, with large reserves of oil and natural gas, copper, and coal. Other important minerals include gold, silver, gems, talcs, clays, vermiculite, limestone, antimony, phosphates, gypsum, stone, sand, and gravel.

Agriculture accounts for nearly 7 per cent of the annual gross state products. Livestock and livestock products—principally beef cattle, dairy products, pigs, sheep, and lambs—are important, as are wheat, hay, barley, and sugar beet.

Forestry is a thriving industry in the north-western part of the state, where most commercial forests are under federal jurisdiction. The harvested timber is primarily softwoods, consisting largely of Douglas fir, pine, spruce, and cedar.

Manufacturing accounts for about 8 per cent of the gross state product. Most of the state's manufacturing industries are involved in processing local raw materials from forests, mines, and farms. Leading manufactured goods include timber and wood products, processed foods, printed materials, oil and coal products, and chemicals.
