Background: New Mexico entered the Union on January 6, 1912, as the 47th state. By the 1990s, services (including tourism) and government dominated the economy, although mining, ranching, and manufacturing were also important. Visitors were attracted not only by the scenic beauty of New Mexico's deserts and mountains but also by the rich Native American and Spanish cultural heritage that distinguishes the state. The region north of Mexico was named Nuevo Mexico by a Spanish explorer in the 1560s. The name was translated and applied to the US territory organized in 1850 and later to the state. New Mexico is known as the "Land of Enchantment". Its major cities are Santa Fe (the capital), Albuquerque, Las Cruces, Roswell, Farmington, and Rio Rancho.

Population: According to the 1990 census, New Mexico had 1,515,069 inhabitants, an increase of 16.3 per cent over 1980. The population estimate for 1997 was 1,729,751. In 1990 the average population density was only 5 people per sq km (12 per sq mi). Whites made up 75.6 per cent of the population and blacks 2 per cent. Also residing in the state were some 134,100 Native Americans, constituting about 9 per cent of the total population. The principal Native American groups living in New Mexico were the Pueblo, Navajo, and Apache; many of the Native Americans resided on reservations in the state. Some 579,200 people, or more than 38 per cent of the total population, were of Latino background. The Spanish-Mexican cultural influence is strong, and many people in the state speak both Spanish and English.

Location: New Mexico, one of the south-western states of the United States, bordered on the north by Colorado; on the east by Oklahoma and Texas; on the south by Texas and the Mexican state of Chihuahua; and on the west by Arizona.

Area: With an area of 314,937 sq km (121,598 sq mi), New Mexico is the fifth-largest state in the United States; 33.1 per cent of the land area is owned by the federal government. The state is roughly square in shape, and its extreme dimensions are 629 km (391 mi) from north to south and 565 km (351 mi) from east to west. Elevations range from 866 m (2,842 ft) at Red Bluff Lake in the south-east to 4,011 m (13,161 ft) at the top of Wheeler Peak in the north. The approximate mean elevation in the state is 1,737 m (5,700 ft).

Industries: The mining industry accounts for 10 per cent of the annual gross state product. New Mexico is particularly rich in energy-related mineral resources such as coal, oil, and natural gas. It is also the nation's leading supplier of potash, and is a leader in copper production. Other important minerals are uranium, gold, silver, iron ore, lead, manganese, molybdenum, and zinc. Farming and ranching account for about 2 per cent of the annual gross state product, with livestock and livestock products making up about two thirds of the state's yearly agricultural income. Leading crops are hay, cotton, and vegetables. Manufacturing accounts for about 7 per cent of the annual gross state product. Principal products are electronic equipment, precision instruments, transport equipment, printed materials, industrial machinery, processed foods, stone, clay, and glass products, and timber and wood products. The making of arts and crafts items is important to most Native American communities. Tourism is a major industry; each year out-of-state visitors provide more than US$2 billion for the state economy.
