Capital: Albany Time: GMT - 5

Background: New York entered the Union on July 26, 1788, as the 11th of the original 13 states. New York has long been a leader in the political, cultural, and economic life of the United States. Despite economic difficulties in the 1970s and 1980s, mainly in New York and other urban areas, the state still ranks among the US leaders in such important sectors as manufacturing, commerce, foreign trade, communications, and finance. It is the birthplace of four US presidents: Martin Van Buren, Millard Fillmore, Theodore Roosevelt, and Franklin D. Roosevelt. Others, such as Presidents Grover Cleveland and Chester A. Arthur, spent most of their lives in the state. New York, named in the 1660s after the Duke of York, later James II of England, is known as the "Empire State". Apart from New York, its major cities are Albany (the capital), Buffalo, Rochester, Yonkers, and Syracuse.

Population: According to the 1990 census, New York had 17,990,455 inhabitants, an increase of 2.5 per cent over 1980. New York was one of the few states to lose population between 1970 and 1990. The population is 19,011,378 (2001 estimate). In 1990 the average population density was 129 people per sq km (333 per sq mi). Nearly half the state's population was concentrated in the New York metropolitan area. Whites made up 74.4 per cent of the state population and blacks 15.9 per cent; more blacks live in New York (2.9 million) than in any other state. Additional population groups included some 284,144 people of Chinese descent, 140,985 people of Asian Indian background, 95,648 people of Korean origin, 62,259 people of Filipino extraction, 60,855 Native Americans, 35,281 people of Japanese ancestry, and 15,555 people of Vietnamese origin. Approximately 2.2 million state residents, or 12.3 per cent of the total population, were of Latino background; many of these were people of Puerto Rican origin living in the New York metropolitan area.

Location: New York (state), one of the mid-Atlantic coast states of the United States, bordered on the north by the Canadian provinces of Ontario and Quebec; on the east by Vermont, Massachusetts, and Connecticut; on the south-east by the Atlantic Ocean; on the south by New Jersey and Pennsylvania; and on the west by Pennsylvania and Ontario. Several boundaries are formed by bodies of water, including Lake Ontario and the St Lawrence River, in the north; Lake Champlain and the Poutney River, in the north-east; the Hudson and Delaware rivers, in the south-east; and Lake Erie and the Niagara River, in the west. Although New York is the largest city in the country, much of New York State is still rural.

Area: New York has an area of 139,831 sq km (53,989 sq mi); 0.8 per cent of its land area is owned by the federal government. The mainland portion of New York is shaped roughly like a right-angled triangle; Long Island forms an extension in the south-east. The extreme dimensions of the mainland are about 510 km (315 mi) from east to west and about 480 km (300 mi) from north to south; Long Island extends about 190 km (118 mi) from east to west. Elevations begin at sea level, along the Atlantic Ocean in the south-east, and range up to 1,629 m (5,344 ft), from the top of Mount Marcy in the north-east. The average elevation is 305 m (1,000 ft). The coastline measures 204 km (127 mi).

Industries: New York remains one of the leading industrial states in the United States, although the manufacturing sector has diminished in importance in recent decades. (Manufacturing accounted for about 14 per cent of the annual gross state product in 1989, down from nearly 20 per cent in 1980.) Chief manufactured goods include printed materials (the New York area is the leading printing centre); precision instruments such as cameras, optical and medical equipment, and measuring devices; electronic equipment such as lighting and communications equipment; and industrial machinery such as engines and turbines, and refrigeration and heating equipment.

New York is also an important source of other manufactured goods such as clothing, computers, navigation and guidance equipment, aircraft, car parts, chemicals, toiletries, processed foods, beverages, and paper, glass, rubber, and plastic goods.

Tourism is a major industry; in the early 1990s, visitor spending exceeded US$19 billion annually.
