Capital: Bismarck Time: GMT – 7

Background: North Dakota entered the Union on November 2, 1889, as the 39th state. Possessing fertile soils and extensive grazing lands, North Dakota has traditionally been an agricultural state. By the early 1990s, although service industries, government, mining, and manufacturing had grown in importance, agriculture retained a central role in the state economy. The name of the state is derived from a Sioux term. North Dakota is also known as the "Peace Garden State" in reference to the International Peace Garden on the border between North Dakota and Manitoba. Its major cities are Bismarck (the capital), Fargo, Grand Forks, Minot, and Dickinson.

Population: According to the 1990 census, North Dakota had 638,800 inhabitants, a decrease of 2.1 per cent from 1980. The population estimate for 1997 was 640,883. In 1990 the average population density was 3.5 people per sq km (9 per sq mi), one of the lowest in the country. Much of the population was concentrated in and around the state's four largest cities. Whites made up 94.6 per cent of the population and blacks 0.6 per cent. Additional population groups included 25,870 Native Americans (4.1 per cent) and 3,462 people of Asian or Pacific Islands origin; the Ojibwa and Sioux were the largest Native American groups. Approximately 4,700 people were of Latino background.

Location: North Dakota, one of the Midwestern states of the United States, bordered on the north by the Canadian provinces of Saskatchewan and Manitoba; on the east by Minnesota; on the south by South Dakota; and on the west by Montana. The Red River of the North forms most of the eastern boundary.

Area: North Dakota has an area of 183,123 sq km (70,704 sq mi); 4.4 per cent of the land area is owned by the federal government. The state is almost perfectly rectangular in shape, and its extreme dimensions are 341 km (212 mi) from north to south and 581 km (361 mi) from east to west. Elevations range from 229 m (750 ft) along the Red River of the North in the north-eastern corner of the state to 1,069 m (3,506 ft) from the top of White Butte in the Badlands of the south-west. The mean elevation is 579 m (1,900 ft).

Industries: Mining accounts for about 4 per cent of the annual gross state product. North Dakota has large deposits of oil, lignite, sand, and gravel. Other mineral resources include natural gas, clays, and lime.

Farming accounts for more than 9 per cent of the annual gross state product. North Dakota leads the nation in the production of durum and other spring wheat, as well as barley, flax, and sunflowers. Other major crops are hay, sugar beet, potatoes, and rye. Beef cattle, pigs, dairy cattle, and sheep are other important agricultural commodities. Mining accounts for about 6 per cent of the annual gross state product. Leading industries are the manufacture of industrial machinery, food processing, printing and publishing, transport equipment, and oil refineries. Although manufacturing has grown in importance, North Dakota still has one of the smallest manufacturing outputs of any state.
