Capital: Columbus Time: GMT - 5

Background: Ohio entered the Union on March 1, 1803, as the 17th state. It has been a major manufacturing state since the 19th century and in the early 1990s was especially associated with the production of transport equipment, iron and steel, and rubber items. The state also has a large farming industry. Presidents Ulysses S. Grant, Rutherford B. Hayes, James A. Garfield, Benjamin Harrison, William McKinley, William Howard Taft, and Warren G. Harding were born in Ohio. The state's name is taken from the Ohio River, the name of which is derived from an Iroquoian term for "fine" (or good) "river". Ohio is known as the "Buckeye State". Its major cities are Columbus (the capital), Cleveland, Cincinnati, Toledo, Akron, and Dayton.

Population: According to the 1990 census, Ohio had 10,847,115 inhabitants, an increase of 0.5 per cent over 1980. The estimated population for 1997 was 11,186,331. In 1990 the average population density was 93 people per sq km (242 per sq mi). Whites made up 87.8 per cent of the population and blacks 10.6 per cent; additional population groups included some 20,848 people of Asian Indian origin, 19,859 Native Americans, 19,447 people of Chinese ancestry, 11,237 people of Korean background, 10,485 people of Japanese extraction, and 10,268 people of Filipino descent. Approximately 139,700 people were of Latino background.

Location: Ohio (state), one of the Great Lakes states of the United States, bordered on the north by Michigan and Ontario, Canada; on the east by Pennsylvania and West Virginia; on the south by West Virginia and Kentucky; and on the west by Indiana. Lake Erie forms most of the northern boundary, and the Ohio River forms much of the eastern and all of the southern boundaries.

Area: Ohio has an area of 116,104 sq km (44,828 sq mi); 1.3 per cent of the land area is owned by the federal government. Ohio is roughly square in shape; its extreme dimensions are about 360 km (225 mi) from east to west and about 344 km (215 mi) from north to south. Elevations range from 139 m (455 ft), along the Ohio River in the south-west, to 472 m (1,550 ft), from the top of Campbell Hill in the west-central part of the state. The approximate mean elevation is 259 m (850 ft). Ohio's shoreline along Lake Erie is about 500 km (310 mi) long.

Industries: Mining operations account for less than 1 per cent of the annual gross state product. Principal mineral deposits include lime, coal, clay, oil and natural gas, gypsum, salt, sand, and gravel.

The most valuable agricultural commodities are dairy goods, pigs, hay, wheat, and beef cattle. The state is a leading producer of corn and soya beans. Other important crops are oats, tomatoes, potatoes, cucumbers, sugar beet, tobacco, apples, peaches, cherries, and grapes.

Although considerable portions of southern and eastern Ohio are wooded, forestry plays a relatively minor role in the state's economy. Almost 90 per cent of the state's annual timber harvest is made up of hardwoods. Two thirds of the output is used for timber and about one eighth for pulp and paper.

Ohio has a long shoreline on Lake Erie, but the lake's water quality has deteriorated so badly in the 20th century as a result of the combination of industrial and urban waste that the fish population has declined substantially. The fishing industry is minimal.

In the late 1980s, manufacturing accounted for about 28 per cent of the annual gross state product. Among leading manufactured products are industrial machinery (notably farm machinery, machine tools, and office machines), transport equipment (especially motor vehicles, motor vehicle parts, and aerospace items), and metals. Ohio also produces a wide variety of other manufactured items such as metals, rubber and plastic goods, electronic equipment, glass, chemicals, construction materials, sports goods, printed materials, textiles and clothing, soap and toiletries, refined petroleum, and processed food.
