Capital: Harrisburg Time: GMT - 5

Background: Pennsylvania entered the Union on December 12, 1787, as the second state. It played a central role in the birth of the United States; both the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States were drawn up and signed in the state, at Philadelphia. Since colonial times Pennsylvania has been an important agricultural state, and it later became a major commercial, manufacturing, and mining state as well. In the early 1990s Pennsylvania remained a national leader in both manufacturing and mining output. President James Buchanan was born in Pennsylvania. The name of the state was probably coined by Charles II of England and combines the surname of Admiral William Penn, the father of William Penn, to whom the king granted the colony in 1681, and sylvia (Latin, "wood"). Pennsylvania is known as the "Keystone State". Its major cities are Harrisburg (the capital), Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Erie, Allentown, and Scranton.

Population: According to the 1990 census, Pennsylvania had 11,881,643 inhabitants, an increase of 0.1 per cent over 1980. The population estimate for 1997 was 12,019,661. The average population density in 1990 was 100 people per sq km (260 per sq mi); major population concentrations were in the eastern and western parts of the state. Whites made up 88.5 per cent of the population and blacks 9.2 per cent; additional population groups included 29,562 people of Chinese extraction, 28,396 Asian Indians, 26,787 people of Korean ancestry, 15,887 people of Vietnamese origin, 14,210 Native Americans, 12,160 people of Filipino background, and 6,613 people of Japanese descent. About 232,300 people were of Latino background. The state had a substantial Jewish community (1.7 per cent) and was one of the principal centres of the Society of Friends (Quakers). The Pennsylvania Dutch, descendants of early German immigrants, lived in Lancaster County and other parts of eastern Pennsylvania. Most of them adhered to the Amish or Mennonite religion, wore distinctive clothing, and worked as farmers.

Location: Pennsylvania, in full, Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, one of the north-eastern states of the United States, bordered on the north by Lake Erie and New York; on the east by New York and New Jersey; on the south by Delaware, Maryland, and West Virginia; and on the west by West Virginia and Ohio. The Delaware River forms the entire eastern boundary of the state.

Area: Pennsylvania has an area of 118,515 sq km (45,789 sq mi); 2.3 per cent of the land area is owned by the federal government. The state is roughly rectangular in shape, and its extreme dimensions are 254 km (158 mi) from north to south and 502 km (312 mi) from east to west. Elevations range from sea level in the south-east along the Delaware River to 979 m (3,213 ft) at the top of Mount Davis in the south-west. The approximate mean elevation is 335 m (1,100 ft).

Industries: Mining accounts for only about 1 per cent of the annual gross state product. Nevertheless, Pennsylvania is one of the country's leading mining states, ranking among the nation's leaders in annual coal production. Other minerals produced are oil, natural gas, slate, lime, kaolin, fireclay, and large quantities of construction materials.

Farming accounts for about 1 per cent of the annual gross state product. Livestock and poultry raising, and dairy farming are important agricultural commodities. The state ranks first in the United States in mushroom production. Other leading crops are corn, buckwheat, oats, potatoes, tobacco, apples, peaches, cherries, berries, and grapes. Although Pennsylvania has extensive forests, their commercial productivity is relatively limited, and the state's forestry industry is small. Hemlock is the principal commercial species, although large numbers of fir trees are cut each year. The commercial fishing industry is of minor importance.

Manufacturing accounts for about 22 per cent of the annual gross state product. The leading industry is the manufacture of primary and fabricated metals, especially iron, steel, and related products. Other major manufactured goods include industrial machinery, printed materials, food products, electronic items, glass products, chemicals, transport equipment, clothing and textiles, paper and paper products, and precision instruments. Pennsylvania is also well known for its speciality industries, including the manufacture of chocolate at Hershey and silk production at Wilkes-Barre.
