Background: South Carolina entered the Union on May 23, 1788, as the eighth of the original 13 states. Its economy was dominated by agriculture until the 20th century, when manufacturing became the chief industry. In the early 1990s South Carolina was a leading producer of textiles. President Andrew Jackson was born in the border area between North Carolina and South Carolina, and Vice-President John C. Calhoun was born in South Carolina. The state is named after Charles I and Charles II of England; its nickname is the "Palmetto State". Its major cities are Columbia (the capital), Charleston, North Charleston, Greenville, Spartanburg, and Sumter.

Population: According to the 1990 census, South Carolina had 3,486,703 inhabitants, an increase of 11.7 per cent over 1980. The population estimate for 1997 was 3,760,181. The average population density in 1990 was 43 people per sq km (112 per sq mi). Whites made up 69 per cent of the population and blacks 29.8 per cent. Some 8,050 Native Americans, many of whom were members of the Catawba group, lived in the state, as did 5,521 people of Filipino origin, 3,900 people of Asian Indian background, 3,039 people of Chinese descent, 2,577 people of Korean ancestry, 1,885 people of Japanese origin, and 1,752 people of Vietnamese extraction. Approximately 30,550 people were of Latino background.

Location: South Carolina, one of the southern Atlantic coast states of the United States, bordered on the north by North Carolina; on the east and south-east by the Atlantic Ocean; and on the south-west and west by Georgia. The Savannah River forms almost all of the boundary with Georgia, and the Chattooga River forms most of the rest.

Area: South Carolina reaches from the Atlantic Ocean, along its eastern side, into the Appalachian Mountains in its north-western corner. South Carolina has an area of 80,779 sq km (31,189 sq mi); 6.1 per cent of its land area is owned by the federal government. South Carolina is roughly triangular in shape, and its extreme dimensions are 439 km (273 mi) from east to west and 352 km (219 mi) from north to south. Elevations range from sea level along the Atlantic coast to 1,083 m (3,557 ft) at the top of Sassafras Mountain in the north-west; the approximate mean elevation is 107 m (350 ft). The state has a coastline of about 301 km (187 mi), indented by numerous inlets; many islands of the Sea Islands chain are off the coast.

Industries: The annual value of the state's mineral output is about $425 million. South Carolina is the only gold-producing state east of the Mississippi River. Other important mineral resources include cement, clay, vermiculite (which is used for insulation and as a medium for planting), sand, kaolin, gravel, granite, limestone, peat, mica, and gemstones.

The state's yearly farm income is approximately $1.2 billion. The most valuable farm commodities include tobacco, beef cattle, broiler chickens, soya beans, dairy products, eggs, pigs, and corn. Other important crops are wheat, oats, barley, tomatoes, beans, peanuts, peaches, apples, and cotton.

More than 16 million cu m (567 million cu ft) of timber is produced annually from South Carolina's extensive forests. More than 75 per cent of the harvest is made up of softwoods such as loblolly pine. The wood is mostly used to make timber and paper.

The annual fishing catch is worth approximately $25 million. Edible shellfish such as shrimp, crab, oysters, and clams make up the most important component of the catch. Some freshwater fish, including eel and catfish, are also sold commercially.

Manufacturing remains a leading sector of the economy. Leading products are clothing and textiles, chemicals, industrial machinery, rubber and plastics, electronic equipment, and paper. Other important products include metal items; transport equipment; stone, clay, and glass products; processed food; and timber.
