Economy: Tunisia has a diverse economy, with important agricultural, mining, energy, tourism, and manufacturing sectors. Governmental control of economic affairs while still heavy has gradually lessened over the past decade with increasing privatization, simplification of the tax structure, and a prudent approach to debt. Real growth averaged 5.0% in the 1990s, and inflation is slowing. Growth in tourism and increased trade have been key elements in this steady growth. Tunisia's association agreement with the European Union entered into force on 1 March 1998, the first such accord between the EU and Mediterranean countries to be activated. Under the agreement Tunisia will gradually remove barriers to trade with the EU over the next decade. Broader privatization, further liberalization of the investment code to increase foreign investment, and improvements in government efficiency are among the challenges for the future.

Industries: petroleum, mining (particularly phosphate and iron ore), tourism, textiles, footwear, food, beverages

Capital: Tunis Time: GMT + 1

Background: Following independence from France in 1956, President Habib BOURGIUBA established a strict one-party state. He dominated the country for 31 years, repressing Islamic fundamentalism and establishing rights for women unmatched by any other Arab nation. In recent years, Tunisia has taken a moderate, non-aligned stance in its foreign relations. Domestically, it has sought to diffuse rising pressure for a more open political society.

Location: Northern Africa, bordering the Mediterranean Sea, between Algeria and LibyaMap References: AfricaVisa: required by all except the following nationals of: British, Canadian, USA, other EU and Japanese.Duty Free: permitted goods: 200 cigarettes or 50 cigars or 400g of tobacco; 1 litre of alcoholic beverages; a reasonable quantity of perfume; gifts up to a value of TD10.Health: a yellow fever vaccination certificate is required from all travellers arriving from infected areas.
