Background: Texas entered the Union on December 29, 1845, as the 28th state. Two 20th-century US presidents—Dwight D. Eisenhower and Lyndon B. Johnson—were born in Texas. In the 19th century the Texas economy was based on cattle breeding, cotton growing, and other agricultural activities. After 1900 oil and natural gas production became very important, and the state also developed a diversified manufacturing sector. In the early 1990s Houston, Dallas, and San Antonio were the state's largest cities and among its numerous important commercial and industrial centres. The state's name is derived from tejas, the mid-16th-century Spanish rendering of a Caddo Native American term meaning "friends"; it was adopted and spelled as Texas when the area was organized as the Republic of Texas in 1836, the year it became independent of Mexico. Texas is known as the "Lone Star State" (after the single star on its flag). Texas's major cities are Austin (the capital), Houston, Dallas, San Antonio, El Paso, and Fort Worth.

Population: According to the 1990 census, Texas had 16,986,510 inhabitants, an increase of 19.4 per cent over 1980. The population estimate for 1997 was 19,439,337. The average population density in 1990 was 25 people per sq km (64 per sq mi). Whites made up 75.2 per cent of the population and blacks 11.9 per cent; additional population groups included 69,634 people of Vietnamese ancestry, 64,349 Native Americans, 63,232 people of Chinese origin, 55,795 Asian Indians, 34,350 people of Filipino background, 31,775 people of Korean ancestry, and 14,795 people of Japanese descent. Approximately 4,339,900 people, or more than one in every four Texans, was of Latino (primarily Mexican) background.

Location: Texas, one of the southern states of the United States, bordered on the north by Oklahoma; on the north-east by Arkansas; on the east by Louisiana; on the south-east by the Gulf of Mexico; on the south-west by Mexico; and on the west by New Mexico. The Red River forms part of the northern boundary, the Sabine River forms part of the eastern boundary, and the Rio Grande forms the border with Mexico.

Area: With an area of 692,244 sq km (267,277 sq mi), Texas is the second-largest state in the United States; 1.6 per cent of its land area is owned by the federal government. The extreme dimensions of the state are about 1,290 km (800 mi) from north to south and about 1,240 km (770 mi) from east to west. Elevations range from sea level along the Gulf of Mexico to 2,667 m (8,749 ft) from the top of Guadalupe Peak in the western part of the state; the approximate mean elevation is 518 m (1,700 ft). Texas has a coastline of about 591 km (367 mi) along the Gulf of Mexico; Galveston, Matagorda, and Padre islands lie offshore.

Industries: Texas leads all states in the total production of fuels such as oil and natural gas. Other important mineral resources are salt, sulphur, coal, cement, stone, sand and gravel, clay, gypsum, talc, magnesium, helium, iron ore, vermiculite, uranium, potash, lead, mica, molybdenum, tin, tungsten, and zinc.

An important agricultural state, Texas typically ranks second among the 50 states in yearly cash receipts from farming. The state is a leading producer of a large number of farm products such as cotton lint, cottonseed, grain sorghum, watermelons, cabbage, spinach, mohair, dairy products, horses, sheep and lambs, goats, and beef cattle. Significant quantities of chickens and pigs are raised. Corn, wheat, hay, rice, oats, peanuts, pecans, soya beans, citrus fruit, lettuce, sugar beet, sugar cane, carrots, tomatoes, potatoes, and onions are also important agricultural products.

Texas ranks among the leading states in the nation in the number of tree farms. Four out of five trees harvested are pine, used principally to make paper products, timber, and plywood.

With its long Gulf coastline, which includes numerous bays and estuaries, Texas is an important fishing state. Shellfish dominate the catch, with shrimp accounting for approximately 95 per cent of the value. Smaller quantities of oysters are taken. The most important commercial finfish include snapper, flounder, and tuna.

Texas is a major manufacturing state. Principal durable manufactured goods include transport equipment, industrial machinery, electronic products, and metal products. Principal non-durable goods are chemicals, refined oil, coal products, processed food and textiles, and clothing. Other major manufactured goods include printed materials; rubber and plastic goods; stone, glass, and clay items; timber, furniture, paper, and other wood products; and precision instruments.
