Background: Virginia entered the Union on June 25, 1788, as the tenth of the original 13 states. One of the first English communities in North America was established at Jamestown in 1607, and Virginia subsequently became a leading colony. Major battles of the American War of Independence (1775-1783) and American Civil War (1861-1865) were fought in the state. Virginia's economy was chiefly agricultural until the 20th century, when manufacturing became the principal goods-producing industry. In the early 1990s farming, mining, tourism, and trade were also important sectors of the state's economy, and numerous Virginians were employed by the federal government. Virginia is famous as the birthplace of many notable Americans, including eight presidents: George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, James Monroe, William Henry Harrison, John Tyler, Zachary Taylor, and Woodrow Wilson. The state is probably named after Elizabeth I of England, known as the "Virgin Queen"; the name may also be derived from that of a Native American community in the area of the original colony. Virginia is known as the "Old Dominion". Its major cities are Richmond (the capital), Virginia Beach, Norfolk, Newport News, and Chesapeake.

Population: According to the 1990 census, Virginia had 6,187,358 inhabitants, an increase of 15.7 per cent over 1980. The estimated population in 1997 was 6,733,996. The average population density in 1990 was 56 people per sq km (145 per sq mi). Whites made up 77.4 per cent of the population and blacks 18.8 per cent. Additional population groups included 35,067 people of Filipino origin, 30,164 people of Korean descent, 21,238 people of Chinese ancestry, 20,693 people of Vietnamese extraction, 20,494 Asian Indians, and 14,893 Native Americans. Approximately 160,300 people were of Latino background.

Location: Virginia, in full Commonwealth of Virginia, one of the southern Atlantic states of the United States, bordered on the north by West Virginia, Maryland, and Washington, D.C.; on the east by Maryland and the Atlantic Ocean; on the south by North Carolina and Tennessee; and on the west by Kentucky. The Potomac River forms the north-eastern boundary. Chesapeake Bay separates the Eastern Shore area, located in the southern part of the Delmarva Peninsula, from the rest of the state.

Area: Virginia has an area of 109,624 sq km (42,326 sq mi); 7.5 per cent of the land area is owned by the federal government. The state is roughly triangular in shape, and its extreme dimensions are 755 km (469 mi) from east to west and 323 km (201 mi) from north to south. Elevations range from sea level, along the Atlantic Ocean, to 1,746 m (5,729 ft), from the top of Mount Rogers, in the south-west; the approximate mean elevation is 290 m (950 ft). Virginia has a coastline of about 180 km (112 mi), and its tidal shoreline, which includes land bordering inlets and coasts of islands, measures some 5,335 km (3,315 mi).

Industries: Bituminous coal is by far the leading mineral product. Other major mineral products include building stone (such as granite and limestone), sand and gravel, natural gas, lime, clay, cement, crushed slate, lead, zinc, kyanite, feldspar, gypsum, talc, uranium, and vermiculite.

Leading agricultural commodities are beef cattle, dairy products, hay, tobacco, broiler chickens, pigs, sheep, wool, chicken eggs, and turkeys. A noted product is Smithfield ham, made from pigs fed a special diet of peanuts. Major crops include peanuts, soya beans, corn, wheat, barley, potatoes, sweet potatoes, cucumbers, tomatoes, apples, and peaches.

Forests cover about 61 per cent of the state's land area, and each year substantial amounts of timber are cut. Oak, yellow poplar, hickory, and tupelo are the most important hardwoods, and yellow pine, white pine, and cypress are common softwoods. About half the state's production is in sawlogs or veneer logs and half is in pulpwood.

Virginia generally ranked among the top ten commercial fishing states in the late 1980s, with a catch worth $100 million. The most valuable part of the catch is shellfish, particularly scallops, clams, and crabs. Flounder, bluefish, sea trout, and menhaden are also caught in significant numbers.

Manufacturing is one of the leading sectors of the economy. Leading manufactured items include transport equipment, clothing and textile mill products, chemicals and chemical products, printed materials, electronic equipment, and processed foods. Also of economic importance is the manufacture of metal items, machinery, furniture, timber, and rubber and plastic products.
